

Andrea Wright

Coach • Mentor • Trainer Strategist

Andrea started CTP Solutions, LLC to address the ever-growing need for coaching, training, and strategy related gaps in organizations. She helps her clients empower their teams and team members to be the best version of themselves. Her unique experiences at all levels of organizations allow her to connect with individuals and companies to offer a personal approach and deliver solutions that work.

Andrea has over 20 years' experience in coaching, training, facilitation, process development, strategic direction, and project management. She got her boots dirty on many jobsites, but realized her true love was with helping companies, teams and individuals achieve more. Educated as an architect, she understands that tight deadlines and even tighter resources go hand and hand. Her planning, design, team effectiveness and communications skills transcend any organization. She also understands the greatest resource an organization has is its people.

As a change leader and project manager, Andrea has had the opportunity to experience many facets of business, giving her a unique vantage point and proven solutions to corporate issues. Her proficiencies include facilitation and change management, training and training development, leadership coaching, and process development. To Andrea, regardless of the type of organization she is working with, people and leadership are key to success. How they communicate, how they interact as a team, how they address and solve problems together are all critical to achieving their desired outcomes. She facilitates this understanding by guiding the organization in enhancing communication, establishing processes and protocols, and providing to the training and coaching often needed to effectively operationalize those processes and assure their long-term success.

CTP Solutions LLC is an organization's best solution to addressing workforce problems and reaching their goals.